fair and full vote Virginia is a republican state. The majorities by which the democrats, aided by frauds and republican diin power tell the story. In 1880 Hancock beat Garfield by 12,810. In 1884 Cleveland beat Blame by 6,141. The legislative elections of 1887 showed an average democratic majority of 2,561. In 1888 Cleve-Irnd beat Harrison by only 1,539. Even if the conditions were the same the republicans should carry the state by a fair majority in 1892, but the conditions will not be the same. The Cleveland majority of last fall was tainted with frauds in various parts of the state. With a republican administration in power in 1892, and with the best of prospects for a republican state administration also, democratic frauds will be headed off. The steady diminution of the democratic margin down to less than 1,600 has been effected in spite of a serious republican division and an unusually bitter quarrel between the manag-

With republican harmony in Virginia, and with the influence of a national republican administration, there does not seem to be any doubt as to the chances of carrying the state. A great many northern people are settling in the state, and a large majority of them are republican. When the democrats can win them and with republican dissensions to encourage them, there certainly does not appear to exist the least hope that the democrats can be successful in the next national campaign,

THE GOVERNOR DID RIGHT. At no time has the situation at West Superior been sufficiently grave to warrant a proceeding so extraordinary and objectionable as the summary dispatch of troops armed to kill. Any attempt in the public prints or elsewhere to exaggerate the facts of the situation to the end that the official blunder committed may be palliated or covered up is inexcusable; because, its effects are to inflict business injury and to put a libel upon the good name and lawabiding habit of the people of the state. -Evening Wisconsin.

That kind of talk is simply nonsense. It comes with poor grace to condemn Governor Hoard when it turns out that no killing was necessary. He could not foresee the result of the strike. He could not understand the exact situation other than the understanding gained from the authorities of West Superior. It would had been surrendered have borne witness. have been weakness, even cowardice, for Governor Hoard to follow the example of Governor Oglesby and hesitate and dally with the situation. It gives the dictionary erary to show that it has made a thoroug study of the question. We are glad to see that our contemporary has begun the campaign of education.—Charleston

This is well put by the News and Courier. Had the Commercial-Gazette thoroughly understood the meaning of the word "gentleman" and framed its conduct according to the definition found In the books, its editor would have been of the party in that state, and finding all minister to Bermany instead of being in the sonp. The News and Courier is right—the campaign of education should have begun long ago in the Commercia!-Gazette office.

A dispatch from New York prints an interview with S. W. Dorsey in regard to John E. Burton, the Gogebic rum speculator: "In my opinion," Mr. Dorsey said, "Burton simply bit off more than he could chew. He did not organize the Bessemer consolidated iron A Washington dispatch remarks that company. What They Meant.

When children are impressed by the personal misfortunes of others, they doubtless feel a tenderer sympathy than do most older people. A little girl once asked why a friend who had been ill with small-pox, "had marks on her face." The reason was told her, and, though she said nothing in reply, her face was grave and thoughtful for many hours after. Some time later her little brother saw a negro whose face was similarly marred, and was considerably amused at what he thought the man's very funny appear-

"He's got holes all over his face!" he whispered to his sister, in high glee, but that young lady gravely drew him aside,

"Tommy do you know what those marks mean?" she asked, impressively. Tommy shook his head, his eyes growing very large and round. 'They mean he's been very sick," said the little preacher, "and that he 'most with a bare majority of 1,539 in 1888, died, and God made 'em there on his face, with a national administration to aid so folks would always remember to be sorry when they looked at him."

Chinese Ideas.

Speaking of the best method of government Confucius said: "Follow the calendar of the Asia dynasty; employ the state chariot of Yin; wear the crown of Chou; and let your music be that of Shun with posture accompaniment."

"In the selection of men let their character be made the important consider ation; the formation of a perfect character depends upon adherence to a high noral standard."

Arguments in the Habeas Corpus Proceed ings--A Boy Murderer Confesses--The Criminal Record.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, July 26.—In the Burke habeas corpus proceedings Attorney Howell presented the argument for the prosecution. He pointed out that no objection had been made to the proper authentication of evidence taken under the extradition act. The extradition act says that it shall be authenticated under the seal of the foreign State and this seal appears on this evidence. These depositions are properly authenticated. The question to construe the extradition act? They ings and in the broadest possible manner.

Mr. Howell then went into the law on extraditions. The evidence which would justify a justice in committing a prisoner for trial justifies extradition, and evidence which raises a strong presumption of guilt is sufficient to lead to committal for trial. Mr. Howell spent two hours and a half dealing with the evidence, and presented a chain of circumstances pointing against Burke in the most incriminating manner. The objection raised by the defense that Clough had no authority to make depositions was overturned by Baker's evidence, in which the latter swore that he had authority under the Illinois statutes.

After a brief address from Mr. Cumberland, Mr. Howell's partner, the court adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow, when the arguments of Messrs. Campbell and Perdue will be heard. State Senator William Kennedy of Appleton, Wis., has arrived here in connec tion with the Burke case. His presence startled the Chicago detectives, who have been shadowing him constantly since his arrival. He attended court all day, taking a deep interest in the proceedings. He was very reticent at first, but became quite mellow later and talked freely about his admission. He said he had been retained to defend Burke, but he declined telling who retained him. His object in coming here was not to assist in Burke's defense here, as he felt that he would be extradited, but as he is to defend Burke in Chicago he thought it was in his client's interest to see him at the earliest possible moment, more especially if he was in the hands of Chicago detectives. He saw Burke in company with Messrs. Campbell and Perdue, the prisoner's lawyers. He declined saying what had occurred between himself and the prisoner, but it was learned that he warned Burke to keep mum as an oyster when traveling with the Chicago detectives, who would be sure to with the other lawyers retained in the case. He stoutly denied that he brought a penny here to aid in Burke's defense, and he ventured the opinion that Burke's lawyers had received no money but what they got from Burke after he was arrested. It is most likely that Kennedy will remain here until Burke is sent back, so as to accompany the party to Chicago and see that his client is properly treated on the

They Are Promptly Captured and Taken to Rawlins for Trial. Douglas, Wy. T., July 26. -In the case of the lynching of James Averill and Emma Watson, on the Sweetwater, last Saturday, for cattle rustling, the coroner's jury has rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased met death at the hands of John Durbin, Tom Sunn, J. R. Bothwell, Sam Johnson and a man named Mc-Lean. The sheriff went to the ranch of Tom Sunn, who readily gave the names of the other lynchers. Sunn was taken in custody, and the party went there to Bothwell's ranch, Both of the prisoners admitted that they assisted in the hanging. The two prisoners were taken to Rawlins where they waived examination, and were bound over All who participated in the hanging are among the foremost cattle men of Sweet Water Valley. THE CHARGES UNFOUNDED. An Investigation of the Complaint Samoan Survivors.

WASHINGTON, July 26. - Secretary Tracy has received the papers in the investigation of the charges made by certain survivors of the disaster to American vessels at Samoa through San Francisco newspapers. The charges by the men were in substance that they had not been paid the "bag money"—$60—which the United States contributed to allow them in case of loss of their clothes by the sinking of their vessel; that their wages prior to the date of the disaster had not been paid them; that they had been dis-charged and sent adrift, none of them with more than $25; that the clothes furnished them in Samoa had been charged for at regular rates, leaving them little or nothing to live on after the cost had been deducted from their pay; that Lieut. Carlin, executive officer of the Vandalia, had refused to sign a certificate for one of the seamen to be presented to the fourth auditor by which he would be enabled to procure his "bag money," and, finally, that when the men disembarked from the Rockton on arriving in San Francisco they gave three groans for Capt. W. H. Farquhar of the Trenton, and that they were deprived of what was justly due them by subsequent action taken by him in a spirit of revenge.

Commodore A. E. K. Benham of the Mare island navy yard says that the newspaper articles have a grain of truth in them and a great deal of exaggeration; that the attack upon Lieut. Carlin is unjust in the extreme for the reason that he remained in San Francisco by his own request and was temporarily assigned to the receiving ship Independence in order that he might be able to look after the inter ests of the Vandalia's men and aid them in obtaining an early settlement of their Figures Upon the Minnesota and Dakota Wheat Crops.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 26 .- The following crop estimate is compiled by Col. Rogers of the Market Record, one of the most reliable crop statisticians in the

The maturing grain in the spring wheat sections has progressed enough toward maturity so that it is possible to form something like a fair estimate of yield. That it will amount to more than was commonly figured a few weeks ago there is not the least doubt. The greatest trouble is in arriving at approximations of acreage that are below average and above average. It will be about fair to offset the increase in acreage with the amount plowed up and the amount not plowed up but which will be cut, leaving the acreage about the same as last year. If Minnesota gets 15 bushel, which many think not too high, the total would be some 47,000,000 bushels; and for both Dakotas 8 bushels may not be too high, or a round up of 35,000,000, making 80,000,000 bushels for both. The last crop, while called 60,000,-000 total was more than 70,000,000 bushels, perhaps not below 75,000,000 bushels of all sorts. It is quite generally conceded that the promise is for 10,000,000 bushels more than a year ago, which concession, if correct, would indicate 80,000,000 to 85,-000,0000 bushels this year. Cutting is getting quite general in the South and will be so in the North next week, although a great deal in the South is not ripe enough now, and much will not be in the North next week. So far very little shrunken wheat has been discovered, but some is in a stage that might be affected yet. Wholesale Grocers Combine.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 25.—It is learned here that the Wholesale Grocers' association of the United States will be permanently organized at Newport Aug. 1. The thirty-five directors appointed almost two years ago to secure the co-operation of the wholesale grocers throughout the country have so far secured the names of 90 per cent of their number. Permanent officers will be elected Aug. 1. The object of the association is mutual protection and to compel manufacturers to divide profits with the wholesale grocers and jobbers on certain classes of goods which the latter now handle practically without profit.

Charlemagne Tower, the Famous Millionaire Iron King---Other Deaths. PHILADELHHIA, Pa., July 20.-A d'spatch from Waterville, N. Y., announces the death at his summer residence there of Charlemagne Tower of this city. Mr. Tower was in his 81st year and his death was due to paralysis. He leaves four daughters and a son and an enormous fortune. Mr. Tower was a native of Oneida county, New York. He graduated from Harvard university in 1830. He studied law in New York city, where he practiced his profession for some time. He became the owner of large bodies of coal lands and was a director in several corporations. The most successful undertaking, perhaps, of Mr. Tower's career was his development of the iron resources of Minnesota, now well known to the world | was conducted in four large stores on as the Vermilion range. He bought 20,000 acres of mineral land in that region in 1875 and worked several years expending several hundred thousand dollars clearing Catholic priest, and a member of the Pro- | the forests. A road was laid out from the lake to a point about thirty miles north. east of Duluth, and July 31, 1884, the first trainload of ore passed from Vermilion lake to Lake Superior. Before the close of the year 68,000 tons of ore had been shipped from the mines, and by 1887 the annual output had been increased to 400,

June 5, 1887, Mr. Tower disposed of his large interests in the Vermillion range to a syndicate which proposed to extend the railroad and develop the mineral resources of the district to the east and northeast of the property which he had developed. On PARIS, July 26. - The National says that that day in this city Mr. Tower handed over to the syndicate the stocks and bonds of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad and the title deeds to about 20,000 acres of land, and received in return certified checks on banks and financial institutions to the amount of $6,000,000. MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 26 .- The death of Gustave Bode at 4:05 Thursday morning removes one of the most prominent scientists of the State, his reputation as an analytical chemist being widespread. Mr. Bode was a trifle over 55 years of age. A year ago he suffered a paralytic stroke, from which he never wholly recovered, and a second recent stroke proved fatal. KEOKUK, Iowa, July 26. - John I. FREDONIA, Kan., July 26.—The water in the flooded Fall river bottoms here is rising two mches an hour. The river in places is seven miles wide and the water twenty feet deep. The heavy iron wagon bridge, after standing fifteen years, went down last night, leaving only two railroad bridges standing in the neighborhood. The food is within a quarter of a mile of the city. The relief party organized yesterday works day and night. Some families, slow to move, are surrounded and are being rescued as fast as possible. No deaths are reported, although a few persons are missing. The Frisco, Pacific, and Santa Fe trains got through to the west and north late yesterday, but can not pass now. The only way out is to the north, across Verdigris river, nine miles distant, and that river is rising three inches an hour. There has been no mail here for two days, and the telegraph wires are operated with difficulty. The weather

Ruin Wrought by the Flood. PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 26.-News received to-day for the first time since the flood from West Fork and Henry Fork gives a sad story of wreck and ruin. Every store from head to mouth of the forks is gone or ruined. Houses, fences, and crops are washed away and several lives were lost. Not a single farmer or resident escaped damage. Hundreds are bankrupt and will have to be supported temporarily by the county. The commissioners estimate the loss in Lee, Tygart, Slate, and Steele counties at $500,000. At Faulsbury not a single house or bridge stands on its foundation, and many people are in the woods. Help is needed at once. Mayor Cibbons has issued a call for a meeting of citizens to-night to render assistance to the homeless people. Contributions are being taken up all over the city and appeals for general aid will be

When they were near the Elwoods crossing on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, a few miles west of Washington, the horse became frightened and ran toward the railroad track. Just at this moment a train approached, striking the horse, which was killed instantly. Mrs. Irwin was thrown under the wheels of the train and ten cars passed over her body, mangling it terribly. MMES. DE STAEL AND RECAMIER

As the daughter of Louis XVI.'s great finance minister, Anne Louise Germaine Necker, better known as Mme. de Stael, was in a high position socially before the French revolution, which position she strengthened by her marriage with the Baren de Stael-Holstein, the Swedish ambassador in France. The marriage put her under the protection of the flag of a nation friendly to France and gave her privileges such as no other conspicuous French woman enjoyed. This position she maintained throughout part of the reign of terror. She devised a plan of escape for the royal family, which, how-ever, was not acted on. She contrived, though, to save several of her friends from the guillotine, but in doing this she made her own position so desperate that she was constrained to leave the country. After Mme. de Stael left France, which was in 1793, the same year in which Louis XVI. and Mme. Roland were executed and the reign of terror reached its height, she went to London. In that place she at once became a social lion. Her brilliant conversational powers, wit, vivacity, and the prestige which she had won as a great political leader in France, gained her hosts of admirers in England, and she repeated in that country the social triumphs which she had achieved in her own, and such as she was destined later on in her life to gain in Germany and Russia.

When De Stael went back to Paris in the days of the directory her championship of constitutional liberty gained her the enmity of Napoleon, who was just then aspiring to power in France. Refusing the bribe of 2,000,000 francs which Napoleon offered to secure her in payment for the property of which France robbed her father, the Corsican despot drove her out of Paris, and she went to Germany. This was in 1802. Subsequently returning to France and taking her residence near Paris, Napoleon ordered her to repair to her paternal estate at Coppet, near Geneva. Bonaparte at this time was virtually dictator of France, and exercised much influence in other continental countries. De Stael went to Coppet, as directed by Napoleon, where she wielded a social and literary influence as extended and complete as any which she had exercised in the old days. Most of the celebrities of Europe and some of those of America who visited Europe during this period called ing this period called upon her, and her receptions were far more brilliant and interesting than those held at the same time by Goethe in Weimar and by Mme. Reca. MME. DE STAEL. mier in Paris. At some of these receptions she was assisted by kecamier, whose husband met with financial reverses in 1804 wishes to be civil. which obliged her to give up for the time They are very becomthe glories and fascinations of residence in Paris. For a year or two Recamier lived with her friend De Stael at Coppet. The epaulets are shaped to the shoulder and are made De Stael's life in Coppet, however, at disagreeable, notwithstanding the splendor his clothing, melted his watch, and burned of her salons. During the entire period of is the one decorated. The new fashion her residence she was under the surveillance of the French authorities. Escaping at last, she went to Vienna and then to St. Petersburg and Stockholm, and afterward to London. At the three latter places she was received with marked enthusiasm. She sighed for her native city, though, and the scene of her political triumphs. After the fall of Napoleon in 1815 De Stael returned to Paris, where she was received with the most effusive evidences of good will. Even many of those who had teen the devoted friends of her old foe, Bonaparte, welcomed her, and Louis XVIII., the Bourbon King, seated by the allies on the throne of France, offered her the most flattering courtesy, and the French parliament paid the debt of 2,000,-000 francs which the country owed her father. She lived, however, but a short time to enjoy her triumphs. On July 14, 1817, just twenty-eight years after the fall of the bastile, she died, two years after the overthrow of Bonaparte and four years before his demise. Of Mme. De Stael as a woman much has been written that is not at all complimentary. She was a coquette, who de lighted in the flatteries and attentions from the other sex which her talents and vivacity called forth. She knew every notable man from Turgot to Louis XVIII. and Frederick Schiller, and flirted with dozens of them. But when fair account is made of the lax morality of the age in which she lived it will be conceded that she was a model of domestic virtues. Of Mme. de Stael's writings, "Delphine, written in 1796, and "Corinne," written ten years later, gained her the most fame. In the first-named work the character of Mme. de Vernon was understood to represent Talleyrand, while Delphine person-ated the authors herself. This circumstance drew forth the celebrated remark from Talleyrand that in that book "Mme. de Stael and I are both disguised as women." Heine, the poet, called her a "whirlwind in petticoats," while another admirer termed her the "sultana of women." Posterity assigns her the highest place among the female names of literary history.

At the time of her marriage to Reca mier, the wealthy Paris banker, the wo man who took his name, and who subsequently impressed it indelibly on the social history of the age in which she livel, was only 16 years of age. The marriage took place in 1793. The reign of terror reached its culmination, and closed soon afterward, and rule by the directory and consulate followed.

It was near the close of the period of the directory that Mme. Recamier first made her appearance as a potent influence in French society and politics. Her husband, who was about thirty years her senfor in age, purchased the Hotel Necker in 1798, and the receptions, which take a conspicuous place in the annals of time, began. Mme. Recamier then had an MME. For awhile afterward she assisted Mme. De Stael at Coppet in entertaining the visitors from all parts of Christendom, who made pilgrimages to that social and literary Mecca. For eleven years she remained out of Paris, which was doubly bereaved in that period by the simultaneous exile of both De Stael and Recamier. The year 1815 will be always notable in French annals for two reasons. It witnessed the overthrow of the Corsican despot and the return of both De Stael and Recamier to Paris. The regime of the former, after that date, was short, as she died in 1817. The most brilliant portion of Recamier's career, however, was only then beginning. She no longer possessed the wealth which was hers in the earlier days of her wedded life, but her social prestige she retained. library of books have been written about her, her salons, and the men and women who participated in them, and the interest in this literature continues. No history of the France of the period between 1815 and 1850 would be at all complete or satisfactory which did not! mention her. While Recaimer lacked the dignity and courage of Mme. Roland, the imperial intellect of De Stael, and the dash, intrepidity and audacity of Mme. Tallien, she had a personal charm and potency, nevertheless, which none of those possessed. More beautiful than any of them, save, possibly, Tallien, she had a tact and intelligence in social matters combined with a geniality of disposition and a grace and sauvity of manner which exercised an irresistable fascination over all with whom she came in contact. Her list of acquaintances comprised a large part, if not most, of the celebrities which Europe produced in a half century peculiarly prolific in great personages. The names of the noted men from whom she received offers of marriage after her husband's death would probably fill a large part of a page of the library of books have been written about marriage after her husband's death would probably fill a large part of a page of the biggest book, even if printed in small type. These names were those of men conspicuous in politics, literature, science, business, and in every other department of human endeavor, and included persons as dis-similar in character and attributes as Prince August of Prussia and Chateaubriand, the author and diplomate, the latter of whom, in 1846, after the demise of his wife, proposed to wed Recamier, although she was 69 years of age at that time and he 77 In an age in which the canons of do mestic propriety had, comparatively speaking, but slight holds on the minds of average man or woman, Mme. Recamier's life was singularly spotless. To the moral law, Recamier maintained allegiance to the end, nor was her name ever authentically connected with even the milder in discretions of which De Stael was accused. Recamier was the last, and in some respects the greatest, of the women who exercised social or political sway in France. When the conditions become favorable to the production of another such potentate doubtless Recamier will have a successor, but he would be a rash man who would predict the return of such conditions when ne considers the influences which are dominant in France to-day.

She has grown stout since she withdrew her still glorious voice from the concert platform, and if she were not so large and well proportioned, she might be dubbed fat. She is a creamy blonde, with fair, soft, wavy hair, low fore head and round chin, under which bonnet strings nestle contented. She wears blue and delicate grays and seldom allows herself much anxiety over her costumes. She belongs to the Rubinstein club, a musical organization composed entirely of ladies, and if ever a prima donna retired gracefully and lived ideally among loval friends after her dethronement Mrs. Cary-Raymond is the woman.

Unless the metropolis gets a fresh dose of energy, the Italians will have their subscriptions done and montiment erected before all the money is raised for that "Memorial Arch."

I am 27 years of age now; since I was 16 years old I was a sufferer of epilepsy. In Germany I was treated by one of the best physicians for five years, without relief. I then came to America and here I tried many so-called cures for that terrible disease, but I was so disappointed, that I gave up all hopes of ever getting rid of it, because I not even got relief. But after all I was soon convinced the these interests are the solid services. convinced that there is a real remedy, which really cures the epilepsy. In the month of April I commenced to take Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, the effect of which was so marvelous that only once since then the fits returned, but now 5 moths have elapsed and not a symptom of the disease showed itself. If you are constipated, you offer a "standing invitation" to a whole family of diseases and irregularities which will surely be accepted, and you will have guests unwelcomed and determined. All these unhappy conditions may be averted by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Petlets. THE SPIDER MAN.

Lunch Fiend. "The meanest game that was ever New York chop house, "was the job of a blooming bloke that used to come in here

"The first time he came in," proceeded the chop man, "he motioned me over to the table where he was eating, and directing my attention to a spider that had dropped into his plate, said, in a very gentlemanly way: "' 'This cuss has taken possession of my

"I yanked the plate away and of course brought him another, with due apologies. As he laid down his nickel on going out he said I needn't worry about the little incident, as he used to keep a hotel himself and fully appreciated how impossible it was to avoid such things. As for himself, he wouldn't give it a second thought. I was afraid I had lost him, but he was back in a day or two, and darn my ribs if the same thing didn't happen again. I was mortified half to death. I got him another and crackers and a nice pickle or two by way of making amends. "Well, sir, that blamed luck happened right along every time that man came in. He called me several times to change his soup, and then he called on all the waiters in succession day by day until he had got round the whole gang of us. At last we began to suspect something wrong and watched the cuss, and blast my eyes if we didn't catch him taking the spider out of a little paper box that he carried in his pocket and deliberately dropping it into his plate after he had eaten nearly all the soup. In this way he managed to get two plates of soup by paying for one.

"Maybe we didn't bounce the spider man good and hard! Oh, I reckon not!
Ask the boys!"

Changing the Headline. The editor of a Western weekly wrote up an account of the death of a good and prominent citizen, putting over it the time-honored heading: "A Good Man

CAPTURING THE CROOKS.

Some of the Games Played on the Innocent People.

POLICE ON THE WATCH, Suspicious Persons Under Arrest-A Policeman Narrowly Escapes a Joker.

Chief of Police Hogan was up and waiting for the "crooks" this morning. Mayor St. John had reinforced the police force by appointing several specials for duty during the day and night, and Officers McGinley and Smith kept their eyes bill. open, ready to capture any one who attempted to play a crooked game. Marshal Hogan was put on the track of a crook who had engaged lodgings at one of the leading Lotels last evening, and that officer visited the hotel at an early hour and changed the fellow's room to don't say that I'm tired either." a saste place in the county institution down on the bank of the river where he will remain until to-morrow. The crooks made their appearance as soon as the circus commenced to unload, and before the street parade the officers had captured nine whom they locked up: so that you can with difficulty pierce it No depredations of a serious nature have with your nail, it is probably e good been reported. During the street parade s sneak thief undertook to make his way into a store on South Main street, Marshal Hogan was on his track, and when discovered he started on a run, making his way into the harness shop of J. A. Fathers, where he was captured and lodged in jail.

The city is undoubtedly full of the light fingered gentry, and no matter how close watch is kept, it will be a matter of wonder if they do not succeed in securing some plunder. The officers are doing all in their power to guard and protect the interests of the people.

The city is fortunate so far. A very large crowd of people bave been on the streets nearly all day, and up to this hour no accidents have been reported. and it is hoped none will occur. The street cars and bus lines were kept busy moving the immense crowds of people to the fair ground where the tents of the great show are located. Officer McGinles "caught on" during the parade this morning just in time to escape being made the subject of a prac tical joke. When the procession swung into South Main street, Forepaugh's 'country Jake" made his appearance and urdertook to interfere with the passage of one of the large vans, by driving his horse and buggy across the street in for him to get out of the way, a "war march will occur when the goods will words" ensued, the procession was at a halt in consequence, when Officer Mc-Ginley came up and started to capture the intruder, but noticed a sly wink eminating from Dave Watt, he quietly retreated into the dense crowd and was lost sight of.

"People can not be too cautious today," said a Janesville man this morning who has seen a good deal of the ins and outs of circus life. "There are a certain class of people who persist in following a circus in spite of the management or any body else and they are sure to get the best of everybody with whom they have anything to do. The 'slide off' game has been very successfully worked of late. The manipulator will sell you fifty cents worth of something. You present a large bill for payment, he will count out your change in several small bills and silver and place it in your hand, pretend that he thinks there is a mistake, take it to count again and while doing this roll the upper end of the bottom bill into the middle of his hand and retain it when he hands you the change again.

Then there is what is called the "hold out," where the man counts out your change in silver in his hand twining his hand bottom downwards over yours thus throwing the change in your hands and retaining a dollar or two unnonticed by you in the palm of his hand.

The 'top and bottom' game is one very successfully worked on those who are unaccustomed to the ways of the world. The perpetrator has soap or some commodity, which he sells in small packages. Projecting from the ends of each of these packages is apparently a note of $10, $20 or $50. A snug price is paid for this, and when the purchaser gets home he finds nothing but the stub of a counterfeit perhaps two inches long.

The "push back" is a game successfully worked lately. A man buys an article worth perhaps a quarter, presents a $5 note for payment, the seller pulls out a $1 bill, finds he can not make change and while confusing the purchaser by some means get; the $5 bill and gives him the $1 note, tells him to never mind , the change, to sit worked on me," said the proprietor of a down, and the man who has been cheated out of four dollars is sometimes never aware of it.

The Flim Flam racket is a change con fusion, worked many times by two individuals in the cigar stores of a city, and is a very ingenious method." Besides these, there are hundreds of other schemes devised by these men whose profession is to swindle the people out of their hard earned money, Many of the shows do all in their power to rid themselves and others of these individuals, but they follow them up with a persistency that cannot be prevented.

of a New and Infallible Method of Identification. Two men of science in two different ountries-Mr. Francis Galton in England, and M. Bertillon in France-have lately recommended a means of identification which policemen and detectives with all their ingenuity, seem never to have employed. These gentlemen have observed that the human thumb, dipped in ink, in blood, in black lead, or in any other loose, ectly characteristic of the individual.
